

This diagram will help you explore the different ways to get involved in global health work

Active Global Citizenship

A first step on a pathway for NHS staff interested in global health equality.

Getting Involved

Connect with the NHS Scotland Global Citizenship community by joining one of our networks -

The People Register is for NHS staff and volunteers who are interested in pursuing global health work but have limited or no experience.

The NHS Board Global Citizenship Champions are a network of staff from across Health Boards (including our retired colleagues) who have experience of global health work and have signed up to be local ambassadors for global citizenship

Volunteering Opportunities

Contact your Global Citizenship Lead Champion for information and advice on health partnerships which colleagues in your Health Board are involved with – either from Scotland or overseas.

Helping from Home

Support the local global citizenship network in your Health Board, contribute your skills and expertise to partnerships remotely or become involved in fundraising and promotion etc

The Global Health Co-ordination Unit may also be able to link you in to national workstreams which you can get involved with.

Contribute Overseas

Search the Health Partnership Map for information on the different health partnerships that are underway to help you think about how your skills and interests could contribute.

Have a look at our Volunteering Organisations page to explore the different opportunities that might be of interest to you.

Guidance

Read the Doing It Well Guide which provides advice and guidance for NHS Boards and staff about how to get involved in Global Citizenship and the NHS Scotland Global Citizenship HR Guidance for NHS Boards and staff to support their global citizenship participation
